@aboutredlands thank you for clearing that up. I just moved back to my hometown and see this brand of candle everywhere and just can't figure out what's so great about it that's all. I thought maybe you just promoted your friends or something and did not give other company's a chance. But it just comes down to money so that make sense. Thanks again for clearing that up

@theanticlick Bennett candle company is the only family-owned Redlands-based candle company that we are aware of. The 10 year old daughter was the master mind behind the company as a way to help children in need. For every candle they sell 10% is donated to a local children's charity. Which we think is amazing!

@aboutredlands that is awesome that the donate 10% and it's a great marketing tool for them as well. My point is that I looked on your site and it shows a few other company's that sell candles. Redlands candle company being one of them and yet you never mention them. It's a great thing your trying to do for the community I would just hope it's about giving people options and not just about making money. Also I looked at @bennett_candle site as well and no where could I find where they donate other then to local children's charity but they never mention who. Just seems odd to me that's all. Thanks again for your time and thanks for helping the community

@theanticlick the other candle companies listed on AboutRedlands.com are not interested in us advocating for them hence no websites or links added to their free listing. We literally know nothing about them and could never refer them. After all, would you refer a business or company to a friend if you had no relationship and nor personally knew their product? AboutRedlands.com provides a local business directory for Redlands as a community service-business name, address and brief description. If they want us to refer them they must add a plan. The Basic plan is $9.95 a year and it surprises us that businesses don't find value as we reach 188,000 weekly. Bennett Candle Company has a plan which permits us to speak on their behalf like we are doing now. We have their products and
